Dear Harold,

I just wanted to drop you a note to bring you up-to-date on my life. I got another new job. This time it's a real job - permanent, with benefits etc. I'm working as a proofreader/editor for a marketing company. I had an interview with them in August and they really seemed interested then, but they couldn't get the OK from the higher-ups to hire additional staff. Evidently they got the OK because they called a few weeks ago to see if I was still interested.

So far I really like the work. The people are all very nice; just about everyone in my office is about my age, so we have a good time working together. The company itself is only a few years old - still growing & expanding - so if I get my foot in now there are decent chances for advancement.

We have a staff of writers that writes evaluation reports on the marketing potential of inventions, & my job is to edit them. It's not the most interesting reading &, since most of the writers are strictly technical writers, their style leaves alot to be desired. It will be good experience to have though, & if you need anything edited whenever I come down at least I'll be in practice.

Cigna has had Robert Morrow on his show a few times in the past several weeks & I believe he had Michael Eddowes on twice. Unfortunately, every time either one was on I was running from one place to another & didnt hear the entire show or get to tape it. From what I heard, Nothing new or unusual; Eddowes was pushing his theories & Morrow was claiming credit for the House's investigation & promising soon-to-be-released "bombshells." Now that McMillan's book is on the stands, she'll probably be making the talk show circuit. I heard that Marina Oswald was on some local show, but I didnt hear it. There's so much crap out these days. I wish your book was going to be published soon; I need to read some sanity for a change.

I know you're really busy with the King business & I wish I could come down & spend some time helping out. However, you know that if there's anything I can do here I'm always available.

Hi to Lil. Mary asked me to have you tell Lil she got her letter & really appreciated it. She also sends her best. Take care.

Best,
Karen
